Hello, neighbors. I'm running for city council to give back to South San Francisco, where I'm proud to live and raise my two little kids. I want to keep our city vibrant, welcoming, and affordable - so every family can thrive.

I spend my days helping communities across the Bay Area. As a policy director and public interest attorney, I support policies that keep neighborhoods and families stable. My approach is to listen and collaborate to understand all perspectives - because that's how we create sustainable solutions that work for the whole community.

South City is a special place: diverse, with a rich history, and full of opportunity. Real challenges exist, but so do real possibilities - especially when we bring people together. We all win when residents can afford their homes, families are supported, and neighborhoods are healthy and connected.

It would be an honor earn your vote. I pledge to work with our community to help make South City the best it can be, for this generation and the next. If you'd like to learn more about me, please visit www.voteaysha.com
